Saranchuluun Otgon is the founder of the NGO, "Chain of Success". She is currently teaching at the Mongolian National University of Medical Science, School of Public Health. She holds a Bachelor's and Master's degree and now is pursuing a PhD in social health at MNUMS.

Youtube is making a film about Saranchimeg Otgon. She was born in 1981 in ger district of Ulaanbaatar. She was a straight A student, and loved music. She wanted to become a dancer when she grew up. One summer she was spending her holiday in the country. Horseback riding in the Mongolian plains, naughty kids spooked the horse and Saraa fell. There was no doctor nearby; the elders treated her injury with herbs and tea. When she got back to the city, doctors were puzzled by her continued pain. She was diagnosed as having cancer in her bone. When she was 13, her foot was amputated.

She never did share her personal health challenge with her classmates. Saranchimeg completed her BA in Hebrew University in Israel. Back in Ulaanbaatar, she became a lecturer at the School of Public Health in the Health Sciences University of Mongolia.

She founded an NGO called Chain of Success and launched a Facebook group, "Let's Run Mongolia!". In 2014, she organized Mongolia's first-ever public running event welcoming people with disabilities. Her prosthesis showing, she ran with men, and women in wheelchairs, missing arms and legs, blind and deaf. 300 participants and 180 volunteers participated in the marathons.

Saranchuluun has fulfilled her dream running in the 42-km, in New York city and become a winner. She said to the TED reporter: "I'm trying to support other disabled people who like sports in my country.
