Nature's fury

Mount St Helens, the volcano in Clark County, Washington State, erupted on Monday morning. The disaster has caused at least ten deaths as well as massive destruction in that region of the state.

The mountain was hit by two earthquakes just before half past eight. Then, at eight thirty-two, the top of the mountain was blown off by an explosion that was heard two hundred miles away. Huge blocks of ice and rock fell onto the surrounding area and the mountain was left 1300 feet shorter. Then the tremendous heat inside was released. Hot ash and gas came out of the mountain, causing a lightning storm as it rose into the air. White ash, along with steam and thick mud, continue to pour from the giant crater left by the explosion.

At each stage of this dramatic eruption people have been killed. The explosion caused the first casualties; several people were injured or died due to the force and heat of it. Then the hot ash started fires which have burned vast areas of forest, causing more deaths. Fortunately, fire-fighters have managed to put most of them out. The volcanic cloud was so large and dark that it was said to have turned day into night, forcing airports to close temporarily. One more life was lost as a pilot flew his airplane into the cloud and hit electricity cables. Mud from the volcano is running down the mountainside and filling rivers, causing flooding. People living nearby have been forced to leave their homes as the water continues to rise.

Rescue workers have picked up casualties and survivors by helicopter, and are moving them away from the dangerous areas. More victims are expected to be found during the next few days. One witness said that it had been like the end of the world. "I really thought we were all going to die," Jerry Irvine said. "I've never been so terrified in my life."

Scientists say that the top of the mountain had been growing by five feet per day for several weeks before the explosion. They say that ash and mud could continue to pour out of St. Helens for up to fifteen years. Meanwhile, the people of Clark County are learning to cope with nature's fury.

It will be quite some time before things get back to normal for the residents of the area. At present, no public services are working apart from the emergency services. Rescue efforts are continuing today in an attempt to find any more survivors. Despite extreme difficulties and dangerous conditions, it is hoped that the rescue operation will be carried out successfully. "Hope has not been lost. We'll all do our best," a member of rescue team reported.

A statement estimating the cost of the damage is expected to be issued later this week.

2.4. Read the following projections about the future population of Australia. Then choose the correct ending for each sentence. There is one extra ending in column 2.

/5 x 1 = 5 points/

Population projections

According to the latest available projections (which are based on several combinations of assumptions reflecting past trends in births, deaths and migration), the total population of Australia is likely to have increased to between 22.3 and 23.3 million by 2021.

The projected population will increase at a declining rate. The average annual growth rate is predicted to be between 0.5 and 0.8 during 2011-2021. Without overseas migration, the projected total population should peak at about 23.3 million in 2041, and then start to decline marginally.

Age distribution

The projected population will age progressively due to the increasing proportion of the elderly (aged 65 years or more) and the decreasing proportion of children (aged under 15 years). In brief, the number of persons aged under 15 is projected to be between 3.7 and 4.1 million in 2031; the population of working age (15-64 years) is projected to increase to between 14.4 and 15.0 million in 2031; and the number of persons aged 65 years or more is projected to increase to between 2.94 and 2.98 million in 2031. The projections also show significant increases in the number of persons aged 80 years or more.

- a. By the year 2021 the population of Australia will have reached ...
- b. The population of Australia will have peaked ...
- c. The number of persons aged over 80 ...
- d. By the year 2031 the number of children aged under 15 will have risen ...
- e. The projected total population should peak at about 23.3 million in 2041, ...

- 1. ...by the early 2040s.
- 2. ...will be less than it was
- 3. ...and then start to decrease slightly.
- 4. ...will increase considerably.
- 5. ...to between 3.7 and 4.1 million.
- 6. ...a maximum of 23.3 million.
